

Mandated Reporter Training

Protecting the Children - Protecting Your Organization

Whether your organization is for profit or not-for-profit, you are held to the same standards when it comes to protecting the children your staff and organization comes in contact with. It is your ethical and legal responsibility to report any incidents of child abuse or neglect - not doing so is putting you, the children and your organization at risk.

The California Child Abuse and Neglect Reporting Act (CANRA) requires certain persons and professionals to report any known or suspected child abuse or neglect to the appropriate agency. Failure to report an incident is a crime punishable by up to:

- Six months in county jail and/or up to $1,000 in fines.
- Loss of license or credential.
- Enormous civil penalties for failure to report incidents that result in death.

HRI's Mandated Reporter Training - Two Ways to Train

HRI offers two ways to provide your mandated reporter staff with training. Our live, in-person training provides your staff in-depth, personal training while our online webinar format provides your staff with a convenient, flexible option for training.

Training Objectives:

1. Understand your legal responsibilities as a mandated reporter
2. Identify the types of child abuse and neglect
3. Learn how to recognize signs of child abuse and neglect
4. Understand proper procedures for making a report
5. Know the protections for mandated reporters under the law

Training Includes:

- Certificate of completion
- Mandated Reporter poster
- Knowledge assessment test (for webinar format only)

Cost:

Pricing varies based on format and number of participants, call us at 925.556.4404 or email us at info@hrideas.com for pricing information.

Who Is A Mandated Reporter?

Legally mandated reporters include a wide range of job titles and positions - basically, any position that comes into contact with children.
